BARRETT'S LAST DAY

Closing Scenes in the Trago-

dian's Life

THE GREAT ACTOR DIES IN NEW YORK.

He Succumbs to Heart Failure After an Illness of Three Days—A Sketch of the Career of the Eminent Tragedian.

TO BE BURIED IN BOSTON.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Lawrence

Barrett, the actor, died at 10:45 o'clock

Friday night of heart failure at his apartments in the Windsor hotel. At the time of his death, he was presenting Mrs. Barrett, Dr. P. F. Chambers, the professional nurse and

Mr. Barrett's manager.

It was a quick transition, that of the celebrated actor, from the histrionic boards to the tomb of death; yet so far as the physician was concerned Mr.

Barrett's death was not without foreshadowing. Wednesday evening

Dr. P. H. Chambers was summoned to Mr. Barrett's room. The latter complained to the physician of a cold, and wondered whether it would preclude

the possibility of his performing that night. He insisted upon going to the theater, but as he was taken with a chill he was forced to return home.

At 1 o'clock that night, Dr. Chambers was again summoned and found Mr.

Barrett with a high fever and a rapid pulse. A thorough examination revealed no pneumonia, which the physician was fearful would prove fatal should it set in. It was thought that the first indication of pneumonia manifested itself, and Dr.

Chambers, fearing the worst, telegraphed for Mrs. Barrett, who was in Boston. Mrs. Barrett arrived at her husband's bedside Thursday evening.

Mr. Barrett's family physician, Dr. Oliver, of Boston, was telegraphed for and arrived Friday morning.

The two physicians made a careful examination, and found that pneumonia had developed in the right lung. The patient's temperature Friday morning

was 103½, pulse 120, respiration fluctuating between 34 and 36. Another consultation was held in the afternoon,

there being no change. An appointment was then made between the physicians to meet again for consultation at 10 o'clock at night. Between the hours of 5 and 6 o'clock Mr. Barrett's temperature had risen to 105, while his pulse had grown perceptibly weaker. At 10 o'clock Drs. Chambers and Oliver went to Mr. Barrett's room. At this time

Mr. Barrett was in a comatose condition, from which, however, he was roused and appeared to be entirely conscious of his surroundings. Soon

there was an evident falling, and at 10:45 the actor breathed his last.

Mr. Barrett during his Broadway theater engagement had been night and day at work, and it is thought that while he was rehearsing the company for the plays in Mr. Booth's repertory

he caught cold. This cold gradually grew worse. He did not mind it,

however, and kept on with his work.

Monday and Tuesday of this week he

but had no thoughts of giving up.

Wednesday he felt ill, and it was all he could do to manage through the first three acts of "Richelieu," in which he played the part of de Mauprat to Mr. Booth's Richelieu. He then found that he would have to rest, and allowed

Mr. Hanley to finish the part for him.

He still thought nothing of his illness, and was so sure that he would be able to play Thursday night in "Macbeth" that he ordered no change of the cast in the house bills. Thursday, however, he was unable to leave his bed,

and it was said that he was then suffering from the grip. People who knew the actor then felt sure that he must be very sick to keep from work.

The funeral will take place probably in Boston and the manager of Booth

theater will have full charge of all the arrangements.

At the time of his partner and friend's death Edwin Booth was at the Players' club in bed asleep. He did not receive notice until midnight and was deeply affected at the news of the demise.

WHEN THEY WORE BLUE

Janesville Men Talk of Soldier Days

SAW A $6,000,000 BONFIRE

Jerome Rowland and His Work in a Nasty Blacksmith Shop—A Twelfth Battery Man Who Didn't Let a Lost Thumb Bother Him in the Least.

When Janesville veterans meet to talk over old times some war stories that are worth hearing are told. The story printed by The Gazette last evening says them to over-hanging diaries, and some of the narratives brought forth are given below. One of the stories had to do with Dr. Palmer's before-mentioned experience in Baltimore. There was one arch rebel, a Washington woman named Ripley, who gave the federal officers a good deal of trouble. She had a wide acquaintance, and was a woman of ability and determination. Her son, Colonel Ripley, a rebel officer, was captured, and in course of time was selected for exchange. Ripley was got out of it, and went to Dr. Palmer and requested him to inform her when her son would pass through Baltimore. He declined. Then she went to General Wool, where she met with no better luck. The secretary of war was next appealed to, but he was iron. As a last resort she went to Lincoln, and returned with this order written on a plain white card:

Dr. Palmer will inform Mrs. Ripley when her son passes through Baltimore.

Flourishing this order in Dr. Palmer's face, she asked "Do you intend to obey that order?"

"Certainly, madam; the president's orders are supreme," the doctor replied.

"Well," she snapped viciously as she departed, "you had better."

Some time after that Dr. Palmer was awakened at two o'clock in the morning to superintend the arrival of a lot of "reb" prisoners bound south. Among them was Colonel Ripley. The detachment was loaded at Fort McHenry before daylight, and dispatched down the bay. Dr. Palmer hurried to Mrs. Ripley's apartments, reaching there between 3 and 4 a. m. He sent his card to the lady, who appeared in a robe de nuit and dressing gown. She was expectant and frigid. "I have called, madam," said the doctor, "in compliance with the president's order, to inform you that Colonel Ripley has passed through Baltimore."

"How did she take it, doctor?" was asked. "Would she have a jocular making mince meat of you just about that time?"

The doctor smiled. "I guess so," he replied.

Saw a $6,000,000 Bonfire.

War incidents are not always confined to the soldiers. Now and then the name of one of the gentler sex creeps into the reminiscences of the great struggle. It was in the summer of 1863, after the fall of Vicksburg, while the Eighth regiment (Colonel W. B. Britton) was in camp near Black River, Mississippi, that Mrs. Britton and Mrs. W. H. Sargent determined on visiting the army. They made calculations to reach Cairo in time to take the steamer Ruth, a government boat which on this trip had several paymasters on board, and six million dollars in greenbacks for Grant's army.

The ladies started from Janesville at midnight bound for Cairo to meet the Ruth. They arrived in Cairo, and hurried to the landing. To their great discomfiture just as they reached the landing they saw the gang plank of the Ruth pulled in, and the great boat with her six millions of dollars steamed on down the river. While they were bewailing their misfortune, however, the Anderson came up to the landing bound from St. Louis to Vicksburg. The ladies took passage on this boat, and just before sunset they had cause to change their regret over missing the Ruth, to rejoicing. Near Columbus they steamed by the Ruth, in midstream, and saw the big side-wheeler enveloped in flames, the passengers and crew trying to escape. Assistance was given the ill-fated passengers, but by this time the boat itself was a total wreck, and among the ashes in her hold were some charred bits that represented six million dollars in money.

How Lee's Plans Were Revealed.

B. M. Bucklin, Co. K, Third Wisconsin Infantry, tells some interesting reminiscences of the war. Bucklin is the only man in the city who served in the Third Infantry—General T. H. Ruger's regiment. He participated in forty heavy battles, including Antietam, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg, and others of note on the Potomac, and came out without a scratch.

"Just before the Gettysburg battle," says Mr. Bucklin, "my company, with others that had been specially selected for the purpose, made a forced reconnaissance along the river to ascertain what the rebels were at. We reached a point on the river beyond Chancellorville, at which place we crossed and found the rebels in considerable force. We attacked them, capturing many papers at the headquarters of the commandant. These were the papers that revealed the true state of affairs and gave our officers the information they desired—that Lee intended to invade Pennsylvania. We marched back with our prisoners and valuable papers, re-joined our corps, and the papers were placed in General Hooker's hands."

His Other Thumb Ready.

The Twelfth Battery boys relate many instances of the presence of mind shown by comrades during the war. One incident concerns Sylvester St. John, the founder of the Janesville Record, and now of Lincoln, Nebraska. It was at Allatoona, the battery had been action several hours and the guns were hot. To leave one of the vents uncovered, meant the piece was being loaded, meant a premature explosion. St. John had his thumb pressed hard into the vent of his half-loaded piece, when "zip" and the thumb had been cut away by a rebel bullet. Those who were watching, and the first spurt of blood had not come before St. John's other hand, moving like a flash, was on the breech of the twelve-pounder, and his thumb pressed hard against the vent. In spite of his mangled hand he hung to his position for some time afterwards, when relief came, and he went back to the field hospital to have his wound cared for.

Has Rosencranz's Greenbacks. Jerome Howland, of the Twelfth Wisconsin Battery still has a two dollar greenback that was paid to him by General Rosencranz at Corinth. Howland was blacksmith of the battery, and during the battle he was at the front, mending a broken gun carriage. Just as he had finished the job up rode Major-General Rosencranz.

"Look here, young man," exclaimed the general, "I will give you two dollars in greenbacks if you will nail two shoes on my horse."

"All right general," replied Howland, "I'll nail them on your horse." The general dismounted, and placing the two dollar greenback in Howland's hand passed on down the line. The Janesville blacksmith admits that he never shot a horse in quite so noisy a blacksmith shop before, but he finished the job promptly and turned the horse over to his commander.

ALL SORROW PAST.

William Mosher.

William B. Mosher died at the family residence at 11 o'clock this morning, aged seventy-four years. Mr. Mosher had been suffering from bronchitis for some time past, and that disease was the cause of his death. He leaves seven children. They are Edward, Orr, Howard, William J., John, Lulu and Millie Mosher. Funeral notice will be given later.

Willie Cunningham.

Little Willie Cunningham, aged two years, two months and fifteen days, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Cunningham, Pearl street, died at ten o'clock this morning. Miss Bretonne is intelligent and sparkling. Her work is intelligent and full of light and life. Wherever she goes she endears to the amusement loving public, and Des Moines is no exception."

Of Donnelly & Girard in "Natural Gas," the Chicago Sunday Herald says: "The piece seems to have duplicated the success it made last season, for since the opening last week the houses have been crowded and people turned away at every performance. Since last year, the piece has been improved in the way of new business; and while, of course, the original story is adhered to more or less, the new specialties introduced, together with the new people, makes the piece go with a swing that it had not before. The laughter is unceasing from the time the curtain ascends until it drops upon the final act."

HE REPRESENTS NO PARTY.

A Correspondent Speaks of Mayor St. John's Stand in City Affairs.

TO THE EDITOR:—The citizens of Janesville, waited the action of the democratic convention with more than usual interest hoping and expecting that the best element of that party would control the convention and would raise it above partisan politics by endorsing the citizen candidate for mayor, but alas, the petty politician and his ally, the saloon, have captured the party and said to all of the good citizens. You must not exact from us a license of $400, or compel us to obey the laws of the state or the ordinances of the city. It now becomes the duty of all good citizens and tax payers to elect Dr. St. John, who is not the candidate of the prohibitionist or republican, but of the citizens in favor of law and order and reasonable license.

Mayor St. John's name is synonymous with opposition to all violations of the city law, to dictations from ward rulers, and to the government of the city in such a manner that the politician shall thrive at the expense of the tax payer.

ENJOYED "THE MAGAZINE."

Court Street Church Entertainment Received With Evident Appreciation.

A novel entertainment was given at Lappin's hall last evening by the young people of Court Street church. "The Magazine" was the name given the entertainment and many listened to the explanation b. Rev. Dr. Eaton and then, when the curtain was raised admired the cleverly arranged tableaux, and when the curtain came down again broke into little raptures.

Little Lord Fauntleroy, the liveried footman, "Dearest" the crusty old earl, were all there in extense. "Songs of Seven" were recited by Miss L. in Fenton, each song explaining the tableaux accompanying it. Rev. E. L. Eaton, Professor Cooley and Colonel N. Smith sang a trio which won them an encore. Later they sang "Old Uncle Ned" the song being illustrated by tableaux. Three amusing scenes, entitled "Annie Rooney," "Our Species Artist," and "Elder Lamb's Donation," followed.

Excellent music was furnished during the evening by Miss Pauline Smith on the piano, and by the orchestra from the institute for the blind, led by Mrs. M. D. Jones.

GOOD TIMES FOR THE F. F. F.

Officers Elected and a Pleasant Programme Presented.

The F. F. F. society gave an unusually fine entertainment at their rooms in the Jackson block last evening. The house was crowded and standing room was at a premium. The entertainment was given from the new stage which the society have just added to their room, and which does great credit to those who had the matter in charge. The programme included several vocal selections by the male quartette, a farce in one act which was well received; comic duet by Messrs. Guss and Kneib; select reading by Mr. Holcomb; music by the orchestra, a tableau, "The Long and the Short of It," a recitation by Miss M. J. Miner, of Richland Center; specialties by a company composed of Messrs. Morton, Edmunds and Hixon; a song by Miss Sumner; and the reading of The Society News by Mr. M. Donald. The society elected officers as follows:

President—C. M. Kellogg.

Vice President—J. M. Brides.

Secretary—Scott Guss.

Treasurer—J. H. Wernock.

Librarian—G. M. Guest.

Sergeant at Arms—W. H. Reeves.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Hoffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and he was told that he would never be able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better. He continued to use it and in a day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at F. Sherer & Co's drugstore.

False Economy

Is practiced by many people who buy inferior articles of food, because cheaper than standard goods. Surely infants are entitled to the best food obtainable. It is a fact that the Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk is the best infant food. Your grocer keeps it.

O. O. D. harness shop: Trunks, suitcases and turf goods. Forty well and dog robes for less than cost.

No. 15, South Main Street.

THREATS OF MOB LAW

Citizens Indignant at Miller's Light Sentence

HIS CRIME A HEINOUS ONE

Officers Warned To Be Prepared for Trouble in Case Anything in the Way of Violence Be Attempted—Miller Now in Jail.

Threats of lynching George Mills, the Beloit tramp who assaulted a three-year-old daughter of a Beloit business man, were freely made today and warning was sent to the city that dire vengeance might be wreaked on the depraved wretch.

Miller is in jail on a six months sentence and Beloit men, disgusted at the lightness of his punishment, are imagining how he would look dangling from the end of a rope. So earnestly were the threats talked of that Beloit authorities today became thoroughly frightened. Cooler heads did much to restrain the talk, however, and there is little probability of action.

Miller was arrested last Tuesday. The charge against him was simple assault, it being thought impossible on account of the uncertain evidence to convict him of the crime for which he was jailed. For that offense he was fined the paltry sum of one hundred dollars by Justice Booth, of Beloit, and in default was sentenced to six months in jail.

The sentence awakened wide spread indignation in Beloit, and talk of violence followed. Miller is said to be a worthy character, who had been working at odd jobs about this city and Beloit for some time.
